Founded in 1972, the University of California Davis Museum of Wildlife and Fish Biology (MWFB) has become one of the fastest-growing collections of vertebrates in the western United States with collections totaling over 35,000 specimens. Originally conceived as a teaching collection, the museum has now emerged as a valuable resource to researchers and educators throughout California and beyond. Our emphasis is geographic representation of the region’s fish, birds, and mammals. The geographic scope of these collections highlights California, Alaska, Baja California, the Pacific Ocean, and the southwestern United States. This focus has allowed our museum to become the only modern institution with an emphasis on interior California.

For more information, please contact:
Andrew Englis, Jr., Curator
Irene E. Englis, Collections Manager
Museum of Wildlife and Fish Biology
One Shields Avenue
Davis, California 95616-8678
Phone: 530-754-8813
E-mail: mwfb@ucdavis.edu
Website: http://mwfb.ucdavis.edu

Dept. WFCB Website: http://wfcb.ucdavis.edu

UC DAVIS
Donations to the museum help support education and outreach programs. The museum's role in education is diverse, taking place in the field and in the classroom. It includes teaching, training, and campus instruction and research for UC Davis. In addition, our specimens are used for health and conservation research, and for species identification by several agencies including the California Department of Fish and Game, California State Parks, U.S. National Park Service, and U.S. National Forest Service. Volunteer and paid internships in the Museum of Wildlife and Fish Biology (MWFB) offer UC Davis students and affiliates the opportunity to work with museum professionals to gain hands-on experience in curation, specimen preparation and wildlife monitoring techniques.

To make a donation, please detach this page and send it, along with a check made payable to UC Regents to:

Museum of Wildlife and Fish Biology
Dept. of Wildlife, Fish & Conservation
One Shields Avenue
Davis, California 95616-8678

Donation Amount $__________

Donations and gifts are deductible to the extent allowable by law.

If your employer has a Matching Gift Program, your contribution may be doubled. Please check with your employer.

http://mwfb.ucdavis.edu